The 104-Week Dilemma

Approaching week 104 can be very critical, as a result of changes in the benefits and benefit eligibility outlined in the Statutory Accident Benefits Schedule.

What's an Adjuster to do? The best way to avoid potential problems is by having a thorough, defensible and insured specific vocational and/or functional work-up conducted on your insured as their claim approaches the 104-week mark.

Using the skills of Psychologists, Vocational Specialists, Occupational Therapists, Kinesiologists, and Physiotherapists, this work-up will provide a thorough assessment of your insured's:

- Employment options (which are suitable for your insured's physical state, education and/or experience)
- Ability to carry on a completely normal life

We have developed the attached checklist to help you with the 104-week dilemma. We think you'll find it useful in helping you to decide when to take action and what to look out for, as well as showing you the advantages of this kind of assessment and the services/tools used.

If you would like more information about these assessment services/tools, please give us a call at 1(800) 363-8900 and we will fax you our brief overview.
